Dear schoolmates,

Have you noticed leaking taps in the restroom? Our school is facing a serious water waste problem. Water is precious. Many places in the world lack clean water. As a member of the Student Council, I call on everyone to save water.

Here are two simple ways to help:

1. Turn off taps tightly after use.
2. Report leaks to teachers immediately.

Let's take action now! Together, we can make a difference.

Fellow students,

Recently, many students discussed whether to use tablets or laptops in class. It has both advantages and disadvantages.

I believe we can balance the use of them with rules. First, if games or social media are blocked, we can keep focusing on learning. Second, when screen time is limited, it can help protect our eyes. To do this, teachers can set a “study mode” as well as a screen time limit.

Let's use technology wisely! Focus on learning, not playing. Together, we can make a smarter classroom together!

B. Listen to the passage and choose the best answer to each question. (根据听到的短文, 选出最恰当的答案。短文播放两遍。)

William Kamkwamba lived in Malawi with his family. They were poor and grew crops on their farm. But one year, there was no rain. The plants died, and his parents couldn't pay for his school. William had to leave school, but he still wanted to learn.

He went to the library often. From books, he learned to fix radios and earned a little money. One day, he read a book about windmills (machines that use wind to make energy). He decided to build one himself.

Using old wood, parts from bicycles, and other things he found, William made a windmill. It was strong enough to give electricity to his home. He was only 15 years old!

People around the world heard his story. They invited him to speak, and some gave him money to study at university. Later, William built more windmills. There's now a book and a film about his life.

C. Listen to the conversation and complete the table. (听对话, 根据听到的内容完成表格。每空限填 1 至 3 个单词。对话播放两遍。)

M: Hi Li Mei! How was your National Day holiday?

W: It was special! I learned how TVs and washing machines work.

M: Wow, that sounds interesting! How did you do that?

W: I joined a young engineer camp in Beijing. We took apart old machines to see inside!

M: Really? Did you fix anything?

W: Yes! We fixed a broken TV. It was difficult, but we made it!

M: Cool! Why did you choose this camp?

W: I'm always curious about how machines work and the best way to learn is by actually doing it!

M: That's true! What else did you do?

W: I read a book about robots. Now I want to build one!

M: You're amazing, Li Mei!

Einstein answered, "Only if you study more physics!"

VII. A. 1. reached for the storybook 2. led him to change 3. 50% more likely 4. turned out to be 5. is crazy about collecting

B. (For reference)

Many students now just memorize textbooks but never ask “why”. This is worrying because curiosity helps us think deeper and find new ideas.

Curiosity is like a key to knowledge. It makes learning fun and helps solve problems creatively. Here are simple ways to grow it:

1. Ask one question daily in class.
2. Read books beyond textbooks.
3. Try small experiments at home.

Let's explore the world actively! Every “why” you ask will light up your future.

Unit 4 单元测试卷

W: Hi Rich. I hear you're having horse riding lessons.

M: Yes, Jess. I believe we'll be able to go riding together soon!

W: Great! When did you start?

M: I had my first lesson this morning.

W: How was it?

M: All I did was brushing the horses. It wasn't difficult but a little boring. I hope the next lesson will be more interesting.

W: I remember my first lesson. I got a riding hat as a birthday present before that, plus boots and trousers, so I had lots of things for the lesson. But my friend's mum had to lend me her jacket because it was so cold that day!
